Acclaimed filmmaker goes back to her old high school and documents innovative theatre collaboration with teens from the all black Fairfield High School and all white Mountain Brook High School in OUR MOCKINGBIRD.

“And though we may think we no longer need to engineer experiences that bring kids of different races together, “Our Mockingbird” strongly suggests otherwise.”

– The Washington Post, Melinda Henneberger

According to the Civil Rights Project at Harvard University, the desegregation of U.S. public schools peaked in the '80s, but since then, schools have become even more segregated. OUR MOCKINGBIRD highlights the transformational experiences of teens from two extraordinarily different high schools in Birmingham, Alabama -- one all black and one all white -- who collaborate on a production of the play, “To Kill a Mockingbird.”

The film weaves commentary from an array of notables including journalist Katie Couric; Congressman John Lewis; Harvard Law School Professor Charles Ogletree; Former U.S. Attorney Douglas Jones (prosecutor of 16th Street Baptist Church bombing); Pulitzer Prize winning writer, Rick Bragg; Pulitzer Prize winning author, Diane McWhorter, as well as actors from the 1962 film and others who reflect on the legacy of Harper Lee’s prescient novel and a timeless line from her central character, Atticus Finch, who said: “You never really understand a person until you consider things from his point of view. Until you climb inside of his skin and walk around in it.”

“To Kill A Mockingbird stands out as a remarkable story of race and injustice, and unique in our history for its ability to advance empathy through the fictional Alabama-based story and its characters. OUR MOCKINGBIRD documents an experiment in contemporary race relations among young people and asks if formal exercises such as this are needed in today’s society?” says Chris Hastings, executive producer, WORLD Channel, and co- executive producer, AMERICA REFRAMED.

“AmDoc is thrilled to collaborate with WORLD Channel and WGBH on the third season of AMERICA REFRAMED presenting the television premieres and encores of important films such as OUR MOCKINGBIRD. As co-producers, we share a passion for storytellers committed to helping us gain a deeper and more nuanced understanding of America today,” says Simon Kilmurry, Executive Director, American Documentary, Inc.

OUR MOCKINGBIRD airs February 3rd at 8pm on WORLD (check local listings) and will stream for free online until March 5th at worldchannel.org/americanreframed.
