“REVOLUTION ’67 accurately and effectively captures the mood, the pain, the loss, the ambiguity, the fear and the continuing impact of the violent unrest of the summer of 1967. This film helps us to remember a time that still inspires and haunts America.”
— Lonnie G. Bunch, historian & founding director, Smithsonian Institution’s National Museum of African American History and Culture

February 12, 2016 – (New York, NY) – Marylou & Jerome Bongiorno’s documentary REVOLUTION ’67 will air Tuesday, March 1, 2016, at 8 p.m. on WORLD Channel (check local listings), as part of the fourth season of AMERICA REFRAMED, public media’s newest documentary series hosted by Natasha Del Toro. The film will be available for free streaming on www.worldchannel.org starting March 2, 2016.

As WORLD Channel maintains its focus on Civil Rights issues, including the encore presentation of Eyes on the Prize, a critically-acclaimed and in-depth documentary series on civil rights in America, AMERICA REFRAMED’s REVOLUTION ’67 continues the conversation.

REVOLUTION ’67 is a critically acclaimed, award-winning film, which offers first-person reflections and accounts analyzing the social conditions that led to the Newark Riots, an event too often relegated to a footnote of American history.

On July 12, 1967, a rumor spread through Newark, New Jersey’s black neighborhoods that taxi driver John Smith had been fatally beaten by police, sparking what became known as “The Newark Riots.” National Guard and N.J. State Troopers were summoned to reinforce local police to quell the rebellion. Eloise Spellman, a mother of 11, looking out of the window of her housing project, was shot by the police. Acclaimed New York Times journalist Bob Herbert was shocked by LIFE Magazine’s image of his friend, Billy Furr, who was also killed by the police. In all, 26 people died as a result of the riots, which lasted nearly a week.

Throughout the film, commentators, including renowned activist and former senator Tom Hayden, highlight inequalities in policies concerning mortgage lending, redlining, urban renewal, and the expansion of highways. Combined, these conditions led to white flight and suburban expansion, leaving behind municipalities in Newark and across the U.S. with massive concentrations of poverty. The film provides a historical framework to contextualize recent events in Ferguson, Missouri and Baltimore, Maryland.

Focusing on the six-day Newark outbreak, the film reveals how a spontaneous revolt against poverty and police brutality ended as a fateful milestone in urban America’s struggles over race and economic justice. “What we learned from making REVOLUTION ’67 is that the cause of our inner city problems is poverty,” reflects the film’s director, Marylou Tibaldo-Bongiorno. Jerome Bongiorno adds, “In order to improve our inner cities, we must reduce poverty by providing WPA (Works Progress Administration) style jobs and massive amounts of counseling. There is no other way.”

REVOLUTION ’67 is the first of a trilogy of documentaries exploring poverty in Newark by the filmmakers Marylou & Jerome Bongiorno.
